The second component, 120m to the SW, is a sub-circular walled structure, interpreted as a dwelling. At its centre is a large saddle quern partially buried by peat topsoil. The third component is a curvilinear stone wall that has been exposed by peat cutting. The stone wall lies between 150m and 200m NE of the remains of the chambered tomb. The area to be scheduled is a rectangle of dimensions 400m SW-NE and 300m SE-NW, to include the three principal components plus an area around in which evidence relating to their separate construction and use may survive. The top 30cm of the vehicle track within the area is excluded from scheduling to allow for their maintenance. The monument, which lies in the Parish of Eday and the County of Orkney and Zetland as shown outlined in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto and which forms
