THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS AND ARCHAEOLOGICAL AREAS ACT 1979 4501
ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as Tom Buidhe, enclosure 480m NNE of Ruthven, comprises a natural knoll that people modified and occupied between 1500 and 300 years ago. A curving ditch cuts the rocky knoll off from land to the S. Slippage of soil to the NE and SW has truncated the surface, which appears to have originally been sub-oval, measuring 36m from NW to SE by 30m transversely. There is a stony bank 0.7m wide and 0.3m high around the lip on the NW and SE sides, with a palisaded trench, 0.5m wide and 0.1m deep, just visible on the inside of it. On the NW a similar trench runs parallel to this for 11m, running 2m inside it. The outer ditch averages 12m wide and 2m deep. It is located on the S shore of Loch Ruthven on land used for rough pasture and grazing. The area to be scheduled is an irregular polygon on plan, to include the remains described and an area around in which evidence for their construction and use may survive. Three fence lines and a gate traverse this area; the scheduling excludes their above-ground elements, to allow for their maintenance. The monument, which lies in the Parish of Dores and the County of Inverness as shown outlined in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto [redacted] is hereby included in the Schedule of Monuments appearing to the Scottish Ministers to be of national importance compiled and maintained by them under section 1(1) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

Subscribed by Malcolm Cooper, Chief Inspector with Historic Scotland, being an officer of the Scottish Ministers at Edinburgh on the 3 day of May Two thousand and seven, before this witness Victoria Ball, of Longmore House, Salisbury Place, Edinburgh.
