THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS AND ARCHAEOLOGICAL AREAS ACT 1979
ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as Eilean Domhnuill, settlement, Loch Olabhat comprises of an island settlement of Neolithic date, together with the causeway which links it to the shore of Loch Olabhat. Although superficially reduced to a low mound by recent excavations, Eilean Domhnuill still retains, in its lower, water-logged, portions, extensive evidence of a late Neolithic settlement, including the remains of a succession of houses. This settlement has proved particularly rich in decorated pottery, and the water-logged conditions promise good preservation of much perishable evidence usually lost by decay. The island is 25m by 20m, and is attached to the shore by a boulder causeway running from its SW corner for 45m. The area to be scheduled is defined by a circle diameter 45m centred on the centre of the island and an attached strip 10m wide centred on the causeway, and includes the loch bed within these boundaries. The monument, which lies in the Parish of North Uist and the County of Inverness as shown outlined in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto and which forms part of the hereby included in the Schedule of Monuments appearing to the Secretary of State for Scotland to be of national importance compiled and maintained by him under section 1(1) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.
