ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as North Straiton, barrows, pits and building 160m W of comprises a group of prehistoric round barrows (burial monuments), a cluster of pits and the foundation trenches of a timber building. These features are buried beneath the plough soil and are visible as cropmarks captured on oblique aerial photographs. Round barrows are characteristic of the Bronze Age, between 2500 BC and 800 BC. The timber building probably dates from between AD 400 and AD 1200. The monument lies about 35m above sea level on a ridge of relatively level ground above the Motray Water to the N. The scheduled area is irregular in shape on plan. The scheduling includes the remains described above and an area around them within which evidence relating to the monument's construction, use and abandonment may survive. On its E side the scheduled area extends up to but excludes a stone field wall. The scheduling specifically excludes a post-and-wire fence that crosses the S part of the scheduled area. The monument, which lies in the Parish of Logie and the County of Fife as shown in red on the Plan annexed and executed as
