THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS AND ARCHAEOLOGICAL AREAS ACT 1979 11197
ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as Drumbowie Farm, anti-aircraft battery, 350m WSW of, comprises parts of a well-preserved example of a heavy anti-aircraft battery, on record during World War II. The area to be scheduled encompasses the aforementioned visible remains and an area around them in which traces of associated activity may be expected to survive. It is divided into 3 unequal areas. The area covering the gun emplacements, command post, associated earthworks and perimeter fence posts (the easternmost area) is irregular, with the boundary following the line of the perimeter posts, measuring a maximum of 80m E-W and 90m N-W. The area covering the generator room (the northernmost area) is irregular, with the boundary enclosing the building and a 3m buffer around it, the area measuring about 12m E-W and 12m N-S. The area covering the computing room and associated perimeter fence posts (the westernmost area) is rectangular, with the boundary following the line of the perimeter posts, and measures about 13m E-W by 19m N-S. The concrete hut bases of the associated crew accommodation, situated to the south-west of the battery, are excluded from the scheduling. The monument, which lies in the Parish of New Monkland (Monklands) and the County of Lanark as shown outlined in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto [redacted] hereby included in the Schedule of Monuments appearing to the Scottish Ministers to be of national importance compiled and maintained by them under section 1(1) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

Subscribed by Sheenagh Adams, Director of Heritage Policy with Historic Scotland, being an officer of the Scottish Ministers at Edinburgh on the 10th day of February Two thousand and five, before this witness Lesley Macdonald, of Longmore House, Salisbury Place, Edinburgh.
