

THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS AND ARCHAEOLOGICAL AREAS ACT 1979 12701
ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as New Lanark, Mill Number Four comprises the foundations of a cotton spinning mill constructed in 1791-3, the remains of the largest of four mills built by David Dale as part of the original cotton spinning complex at New Lanark. It lies on the N bank of the River Clyde, within the New Lanark industrial village, now designated a World Heritage Site. The area to be scheduled comprises the rectangular footprint of the mill and former sunken area to the north-east, together with a rectilinear area where the tail race flows to the River Clyde to the south-west, to include the remains described, as shown in red on the accompanying plan. On the NW side, the scheduled area extends up to but excludes the former NW gable of the mill, which has been integrated into the fabric of Mill Number Three. In order to allow for maintenance, the scheduling specifically excludes the waterwheel and associated machinery, the above-ground elements of the reconstructed walls and all path surfaces, cobbling, and concrete steps to a depth of 300mm below ground level. The scheduling also specifically excludes a sewage pumping station installed in 2008 within a new concrete chamber sited to the north-west of the wheel-pit (centred on NS 88060 42472 and measuring c 6.5m by 6m by 3m high), together with an area of ground up to 0.75 m below the chamber where pipes have been installed. The monument, which lies in the Parish of Lanark and the County of Lanark as shown in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto [REDACTED]
