ENTRY IN THE SCHEDULE OF MONUMENTS

The monument known as Quoy, anti-aircraft battery (WW2) and radar 220m WSW of comprises the remains of an anti-aircraft battery and gun-laying radar site dating from the Second World War. It is visible as a series of concrete structures, timber poles and associated earthwork and concrete remains. This battery is part of a network of Second World War anti-aircraft batteries built to defend the strategic harbour of Scapa Flow. It is located at around 35m above sea level on one of the highest points on the island of South Walls, overlooking Longhope Bay to the north and the Pentland Firth to the south. The scheduled area is irregular on plan and includes the remains described above and an area around them within which evidence relating to the monument's construction and use is expected to survive. Specifically excluded from the scheduling are the above-ground elements of all post-and-wire fences to allow for their maintenance. The monument, which lies in the Parish of Walls and Flotta and the County of Orkney and Zetland as shown in red on the Plan annexed and executed as relative hereto and which forms part of the subjects [redacted] is hereby included in the Schedule of Monuments appearing to the Scottish Ministers to be of national importance compiled and maintained by them under section 1(1) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

Subscribed by Barbara Cummins, Director of Heritage Management with Historic Scotland, being an officer of the Scottish Ministers at Edinburgh on the 19 day of March Two thousand and fifteen, before this witness Victoria Murray, of Longmore House, Salisbury Place, Edinburgh.
